BONN-JERUSALEM CONFLICT

GERMANY HELPS NASSER

ISRAELIS HEAR NUCLEAR EGYPT BASE IS BONN'S

JERUSALEM (CJN). — Eleven years after Israel concluded the reparations agreement with Bonn, relations between West Germany and the Jewish State are at its lowest ebb. As each day passes, more Israeli statesmen are convinced that the opposition to the Ben Gurion-Adenauer deal was not so great a feat of statesmanship as its proponents claimed at that time. Only last week the official mouthpiece of Israel's Foreign Ministry, the Jerusalem Post, stated editorially, in a complete reversal of its previous pro-Bonn stand:

"Candor never has a hallmark of German policy towards Israel. Reparations, used in Germany as a kind of ultimate guilt-edged act of contrition, was in reality agreed upon only after considerable pressure by the Allied Powers and Israel.... Today (it is considered in Germany) rather an act of generosity to the Jews."

In the meantime, as the last debate in the Knesset has proven, the anger of the Israelis against the German scientists helping Nasser to become a nuclear power is mounting. No one here, except a few who try "to get out of Germany a little more money," is fooled by the "helplessness" of the German government vis-a-vis the scientists in the Egyptian capital

While Erhard claims that his government cannot forbid its citizens to work for Nasser— whose only aim in mobilizing for war is the destruction of Israel — a former Israeli ambassador and cabinet minister now a member of the Knesset, Israel Barzilay, openly stated in Parliament:

- The real reason for Dr. Ludwig Erhard's inaction against the scientists working in Egypt is not the legal complication but that the West German government is behind them and is interested in their work.
- Germany cannot pursue on its own territory a nuclear development program because of the official opposition of the Allied Powers.
- Barzilay quoted a letter of the West German minister for scientific development as proof for his accusation and added that all appeals to the German conscience are ridiculous.
- According to Barzilay, "German policy in the Middle East is to replace France and Britain. All their legalistic excuses for not taking action against the scientists are sheer hypocrisy."

This opinion is shared by many party leaders in Israel. Some claim that there is a secret agreement between Germany and Nasser according to which Bonn would continue to publicly flirt with Israel, without exchanging official diplomatic representatives, while operating on Egyptian territory bases for nuclear experiments.

Reliable sources told The Canadian Jewish News that Willie Messerschmidt, of World War 11 notoriety, never would have agreed to work for Nasser without some approval by Bonn.

It is admitted that there is opposition among some West Germans against this policy of collaboration with Nasser. But those who are helping reorganize Bonn's military power are emulating the secret tactics of the pre-World War 11 generals who surreptitiously rebuilt the Reichswehr while the official German government were misleading the Allies.

Israel is aware of the great threat to peace because of the German activity in Cairo.

Israel & Moscow Will Not Cry For Khruschev

JERUSALEM, (CJN) — The Jerusalem Post, semi-official government daily, stated editorially on Sunday:

"Israel cannot regret greatly the departure of a Soviet leader who consistently followed a pro-Arab policy and apparently did nothing to suppress the discrimination to which the Jews in Russia are being subjected. But Mr. Khrushchev will remain the initiator of de-Stalinization and coexistence, and he opposed armed conflict in the Middle East, as elsewhere.

We can only hope that in this essential matter his successors will follow his policies, while showing more understanding towards the problem of Israel and those of the Jews of Russia".

TORONTO MINISTER SAYS CANADA CHURCHES WILL FIGHT BIGOTRY

By OSCAR BERSON
(CJN Staff Reporter)

The time has come for all faiths in Canada to unite in a supreme effort to have all antisemitic propaganda stopped and for promoting an effective law against the dissemination of hatred in this country. Racial propaganda, the spreading of bigotry, a movement dividing our nation, is not the problem of the Jews but of all Canadians. It is unfair to let the Jews themselves lead such a movement.

This is, in essence, the statement made to The Canadian Jewish News by the Rev. Dr. John Morgan of Toronto's First Unitarian Church.

....We interviewed the eminent clergyman, known for his liberal views, following an announcement in Ottawa that Rev. Morgan's protest against the mailing of hate literature (one booklet was the most vicious attack against Rabbi Abraham Feinberg) has been taken into consideration by the postal authorities.

The announcement from Ottawa by the office of the postmaster general was to the effect that the government is investigating Dr. Morgan's complaint, especially as to the use of Box 11 of Postal Station "R" in Toronto, which is disseminating hate literature.

At this moment it is known that the postmaster general and the government are contemplating serious steps against the disseminators of hatred.

It was also confirmed in Ottawa what The Canadian Jewish News reported several weeks ago: that orders have been issued to deny the use of mail to two American antisemitic organizations.

This week, the Canadian Jewish Congress leadership, headed by Michael Garber, Q.C., president, paid a visit to Prime Minister Lester Pearson and conferred with him and members of his cabinet on issues affecting the Jewish people. Among others, the problem of modifying the criminal code in order to prosecute those guilty of Nazi propaganda was discussed.

The Congress delegation also took up the matter of Russian Jews and demanded that the United Nations discuss their travail.

A joint delegation of the United Zionist Council and Canadian Jewish Congress appraised the government of the concern of Canadian Jews because of the recent deterioration of the situation in the Middle East.

In his interview with The Canadian Jewish News, Rev. John Morgan felt elated because of the first steps towards action against the disseminators of hatred which, he said, encourages him to work harder with personalities in other churches, such as the Anglican Church, the United Church, the Catholic Church, for the common cause of purifying Canada's atmosphere from the germs of Hitlerism.

Dr. Morgan concluded by saying that new liberal winds are blowing over all churches, especially since the Ecumenical Council debates. Also, he is hopeful for a serious non-sectarian, non-partisan effort against bigots.

THE ISSUE: SURVIVAL OF MANKIND

Many ask: is it really true that THIS week — of all weeks — a Jewish delegation visiting the Prime Minister and members of his Cabinet has demanded that Canada place the question of antisemitism in the Soviet Union on the agenda of the United Nations Assembly?

Prior to Khrushchev's "retirement", Washington was pressing the world organization to take action against Moscow for sabotaging the power of action of the United Nations by refusing to abide by its financial obligations.

Now the United States has decided to postpone this issue in order to review the more important problem of its overall relations with Russia. At such a moment, the Canadian Press reports from Ottawa that a Jewish delegation has asked the government of Canada "to raise the question of antisemitism in Russia at the United Nations."

One also can ask: is it possible, even if Ottawa wills it, to have the UN Assembly take up this point at this moment? Is it the right time?

Of course, last week, before the fateful Wednesday, this was one of the most vital Jewish issues. Now the problem is otherwise.

First, we must wait and see whether the Brezhnev regime will change its Jewish policy.

Some observers on the international scene tend to believe that both Kosygin and Brezhnev belong to the younger generation of the Russian leaders — perhaps less racially prejudiced than was Khrushchev — and may be inclined to side with the Soviet intellectuals of the Yevtushenko group who had urged for a long time a change in the USSR Jewish policy. At this time of uncertainty, at a period when the image of the new Soviet regime is blurred (to say the least), when there is a definite change of government, when the Moscow rulers will be more dependent upon the Communist Parties outside Russia — why should we assume, a priori, that the Jewish situation behind the Iron Curtain requires a United Nations debate?

In general, when a Jewish delegation sees government leaders, would it not be more practical to concentrate upon the issues upon which the Canadian government could be asked to act—and should act—immediately, as they are the problems afffecting all Canadians at this moment? Is it not just that now, on the internal front, the most important demand is that of banning hate propaganda from the media of communication? It is not right that, on the international scene, indirectly affecting the balance in theMiddle East and world peace, that the activity of German scientists in Cairo — which Israel officially declared an immediate menace to its security and very existence — should concern world opinion? Is it not correct to state that too many problems raised now are bound to confuse those approached by us, and the essence of the matter will be lost in this mishmash?

Coming back to the number one problem disturbing at this moment, one can only remind the Jewish spokesmen who visited Ottawa this week the words of the sages of the Talmud: a Jewish calamity is not a calamity at alt; a world catastrophe is a Jewish catastrophe.

Mankind now is engaged in a supreme effort for survival. In this effort the Jewish people, from historic experience, knows that nothing — but nothing — is more important than the quest for peace, and waging the battle for peace. Anything else raised at this moment not only is inconsistent with the pragmatic life-philosophy of our people, but also affects the standing, the dignity, the very prestige of our community.

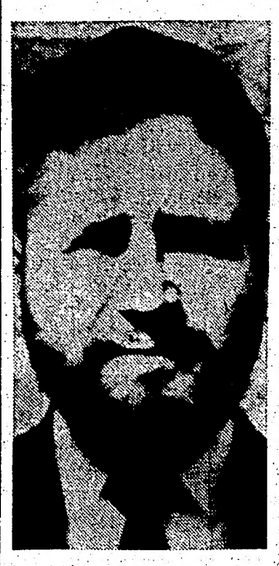
New Soviet Book On Jews

LONDON (JCNS) — A book of "documentary sketches" called "Jewish Life in the Soviet Union" is to be published in Moscow soon, sponsored by the Union of Soviet Writers and edited by members of the Moscow Yiddish periodical, "Sovietish Haymland".

Among the 20 authors contributing to the volume is Shira Gorshman, who writes about a State farm in Kazakhstan, where one of the leading figures is a Jewess, Lea Goldberg. She recently won high praise from Mr. Khruschev for her "outstanding work".

SHAZAR'S BROTHER ALLOWED TO EMIGRATE

JERUSALEM (JCNS) — President Shazar's requests to the Soviet authorities to allow his brother to emigrate from Leningrad to Israel has been granted. The President's brother, Dr. Avraham Rubashov, a physician, is already in Israel.



WILL SPEAK IN TORONTO — Rabbi Samuel Schrage of Brooklyn, New York, prominent organizer and commander of the Maccabees, safety patrol of Crown Heights, will speak on: The Jew and the Negro, at Toronto's Shaarei Shomayim Congregation on Wednesday evening, October 28th, at 8:30 p.m.

Rabbi Schrage, unofficial mayor of the Crown Heights section of Brooklyn, is known for his leadership in organizing the Maccabees to combat Negro vandalism. He is the first rabbi-candidate for the New York City Council. In his lecture, Rabbi Schrage will deal with the broader aspects of the Civil Rights problems as well as the Jewish role in the Negro revolution.

ZIONIST CONVENTION MAY DISCUSS SUPERSOL

A financial publication reports that the present president of Super-Sol has resigned and that Charles R. Bronfman, chairman of the board, has assumed direction of the Canadian-owned company which operates seven supermarkets in Israel. This information was released by the Israel Investor's Report.

The Canadian directors of Super-Sol met last Friday at the offices of Cemp in Toronto, at which time the recent fraud committed by Israeli employees was discussed and the general situation of the company appraised.

The Canadian Jewish News was unable to obtain any information about the decisions of the board meeting. Many of our readers have asked whether it is correct to assume that the company will launch more shares to cover the recent losses. However, at this point no official information is forthcoming.

As the Super-Sol affair may have effects in the invesment field, it is expected that the forthcoming Zionist convention in Montreal this weekend will take up this problem in the interest of Israel.

The Canadian Jewish News is preparing a complete report on its findings in Israel, which will be published soon.

Khrushchev Defeat Upsets Jewish Communists

HOLD INTERNATIONAL EMERGENCY CONFERENCE IN PARIS

PARIS (CJN) — The crisis in Moscow which abruptly ended the career of Nikita Khrushchev has caught unaware Jewish Communist newspaper editors who met here last weekend. The meeting which was called prior to the dismissal of Khrushchev brought together in the offices of the Paris Yiddish Communist daily, Naye Presse, editors of Communist Jewish publications on both sides of the Iron Curtain.

Foremost among the participants are: Aaron Vergelis, editor of the Moscow Sovietish Haymland; G. Koenig, editor of the Naya Presse; Moshe Sneh, member of the Knesset and editor of Israel's Communist daily, Kol Haam; H. Smolar, editor of the Warsaw Yiddish daily, Folkshtyme; P. Novik, editor of the New York Morgen Freiheit; and others.

Officially the meeting had been called to discuss the "propaganda" in the West against Soviet antisemitism. Unofficially, however, some of the participants privately admitted that they were concered about some Soviet anti-Jewish manifestations in recent years.

Now that Khruchev is out, a member of the French delegation to this meeting openly admitted to this newspaper that the Jewish Communists believe the change is for the better, as Khrushchev had shown in the past some anti-Jewish tendencies. This source claims that the world Communist movement now will be able to exert more influence upon Russia's Jewish policy than it could have done before.

The French Jewish Communist group is on very friendly terms with the Chinese. Apparently it hopes to undertake some steps in this direction.

The entire conference is clouded in mystery. Despite the list of participants wihch was handed to this writer, no one is sure whether all of the announced conferees are present.

A delegate told The Canadian Jewish News that he believes one of the reasons for Khrushchev's downfall was his plan to meet German Chancellor Erhard. Wadyslaw Gomulka, Communist leader of Poland, was one of the Communist leaders who consistently opposed this meeting.

Church Shocks Jews

JOHANNESBURG (JCNS) — The hoary old libel disseminated by antisemites the world over and a favourite of the Nazis, that the Jews are behind the world Communist movement, has been given a new lease of life in South Africa by articles in "Anticom", a newsletter issued by the interchurch commission of the Dutch Reformed Churches of South Africa.

Dr. J. D. Vorster, the actuary of the biggest Dutch Reformed Church and brother of the Minister of Justice, Mr. B. J. Vorster, denied in an interview with the "South African Jewish Times" that the Dutch Reformed Church was anti-Jewish.

He called on the Jewish community to come out openly against Communism, declaring the time ripe to counter the spread of Communism among Jewish youth.

South African Jews were dismayed at the appearance of "Antico's" articles. They have long been accustomed to similar views being expressed by the lunatic fringe, but for the Dutch Reformed Church to be identified with the expression of them is a different matter.

FEWER SYNAGOGUES IN RUMANIA

LONDON (JCNS) — The number of active synagogues in Rumania is down to below a hundred, according to a visitor who has just returned from the capital, Bucharest.

In Bucharest itself, there are still 30 houses of prayer. All Rumanian synagogues are affiliated with the capital's community. There are estimated to be 150,000 Jews in Rumania today.

NEW BRITISH PREMIER'S PLEDGE ON ISRAEL

LONDON, (JCNFS). — On the eve of the elections (September 25), Mr. Harold Wilson, then Leader of the Opposition, issued a clear statement on Labour's position on the Middle East, in an interview with the Chronicle, organ of British Jewry.

Following are excerpts from Prime Minister Wilson's declaration

In our Foreign Policy statement in 1958, the Labour Party Conference set out the following objectives: The Middle East must not be dominated by the Great Powers. The independence of Middle East States must be preserved, but the freely determined association of Arab States wishing to work together for their common good should not be impeded. Our influence should be used to encourage the fair distribution of economic resources and the growth of democratic institutions in the Arab countries.

Labour's policy is based on the following five principles:

(i) We should seek the co-operation of the Middle East States and other Powers concerned in taking the area out of cold war politics and should endeavour to achieve a controlled and balanced disarmament programme for this area;

(ii) Acting through the United Nations, the Great Powers should guarantee the existing frontiers of the States in the area, including Israel, subject to any adjustments by mutual consent;

(iii) An Economic Council for the Middle East should be established under the United Nations to promote development programmes for this area of poverty, to ensure a fairer distribution of oil revenues and to act as a channel for economic aid from outside the area;

(iv) Our oil supplies should be guaranteed through commercial arrangements rather than through the use or threat of force;

(v) We should support fresh initiatives for a peace settlement by negotiation between Isreal and the Arab States, to include recognition of the State of Israel, the ending of the economic blockade, the resettlement of Arab refugees with external aid and compensation for those who have lost their land.

These objectives still stand.

A Labour Government would actually seek to promote peaceful relations between Israel and the Arab States; but it would be folly to assume that we could succeed alone.

The Tripartite Declaration of 1950 has not proved an effective instrument and was ignored by the Conservative Government in 1956. I have myself stated that we should seek a new declaration to guarantee the frontiers of the States in the area, but that we should seek the support also of the Soviet Union.

The Labour Party fully support the Johnston plan for the equitable division of the Jordan waters. Israel, in her project to provide water for the Negev, is taking no more than the proportion once accepted by the Arab States under the Johnston plan, and I cannot therefore accept the proposals to divert the tributaries of the Jordan as other than an act of retribution by the Arab States. It is a tragedy that this sharp disagreement should have arisen when the waters of the Jordan could be so fruitfully utilised for irrigation of Arab and Jewish lands.

This can only come as part of a broader settlement. Undoubtedly the bulk of its refugees must be assisted to settle in the lands where they have lived for 17 years, but as part of an agreement I believe that Israel should be prepared to accept an agreed number of Arabs as citizens of the State of Israel. International help in terms of compensation will be required, and a Labour Government would do what it could to help.

ANOTHER PIUS MYSTERY

NAZI DOCUMENTS "STOLEN"

GENEVA (JCNS) — What has happened to the file of documents relating to diplomatic contacts between the then German Ambassador to the Vatican and Pope Pius XII from October 15, 1943, onwards? The date is an important one. It marked the promulgation of the order for the deportation of the Jews of Rome and northern Italy.

The loss of the file was discovered some time ago by Czech-born Professor Saul Friedlaender, who is now an Israeli citizen and is at present working at the Graduate School of International Studies in Geneva. Professor Friedlaender is a former secretary to Dr. Nahum Goldmann and, in 1961, served as head of a department to Mr. Shimon Peres, the Deputy Defence Minister of Israel.

The missing file is No. 6 in a series of Nazi Government files now in the possession of the Bonn Government. They were stored near London after the war, where they were photographed before being returned to Germany between 1956 and 1958.

Puzzled Officials

Professor Friedlaender told your correspondent that he discovered the file was missing when he looked through the collection of Nazi files on relations with the Vatican, starting with the election of Pope Paul XII in March, 1939. "I followed each subsequent file, numbered 1, 2, 3, 4 and, finally, 5. File No. 5 ends on October 15, 1943, with a note: 'See File No. 6.' But No. 6 was missing, although I made an extensive search with the help of honestly puzzled Foreign Ministry officials in Bonn."

Professor Friedlaender did find copies of documents from file No. 6 in other files, ten documents out of a probable total of 500. It was only later that the significance of the date of the missing file occurred to him. He returned to Bonn to continue the search.

He inspected the files which were geographically sited nearest to the Vatican files, those dealing with Italy and France. The Italian files went up to June 1944, the French to May 1944.

'No Coincidence'

"In my mind (I am an historian), the identical date of the deportation orders and of the closure of file No. 5 is no coincident," Professor Friedlaender told me. It is his hypothesis that file No. 6 contained, among other things, the reports of the German Ambassador to the Vatican on the reactions of the Pope and the Curia to the deportation orders against the Jews.

He stressed that he was not accusing anybody. File No. 6 was already missing when the archives were filmed in England. However, in response to the German Foreign Ministry statement this week that the archives were incomplete because many documents were destroyed in air-raids and by other events of the war, Professor Friedlaender pointed out that other adjacent files would also have been affected in this case. In fact, they were not.

The mystery remains.

KEEP SMILING

INTERPRETATION

The Philosophical Library recently published Dr. D. D. Runes' book: Karl Marx — A World Without Jews. It is a critical analysis of Marx's antisemitism as reflected in essays he published just before he wrote, Das Kapital.

Free copies were sent to several government leaders. From Cairo came this response:

"I am writing to thank you for your book entitled, World Without Jews, which I am reading with interest —Gamal Abdel Nasser, President of the UAR."

WHY NOT?

A letter was recently received by Beth Emeth Synagogue, Larchmont, New York, that started out, "Dear Miss Synagogue."

SOURCE OF PROSPERITY

The superintendent of the Sunday school at the First Methodist Church of a town in Alberta, walked into one of the classrooms and began to test the knowledge of the children. He asked them where they hoped to go after death. A variety of inconsequential answers were offered. Finally Milton Greenberg, the only Jewish boy in the class, raised his hand and said that after his death he hoped to go to hell.

"To hell!" exclaimed the amazed superintendent "What makes you say that?"

"Because," explained Milton, "I have heard my pa say that that's where all the business has gone to."

WAIT AND SEE

BRITAIN'S LABOR GOVERNMENT

The victory of the Labor Party in Britain, the takeover by Harold Wilson of Ten Downing Street, naturally forces us to examine the prospects from the Jewish point of view.

First of all, it is relevant to note that prior to the last election the new Prime Minister went on record for some legal measures against neo-Nazi propaganda in Britain. Mr. Wilson is committed to an anti-Nazi propaganda law.

So far as Israel is concerned, the Labor Party also has made firm, unequivocal declarations, some of which are printed elsewhere in this issue of The Canadian Jewish News. These statements, these promises are very important to Israel when one takes into consideration the fact that Great Britain still plays an important role in the Middle East and in the Arab world. Its interests in that part of the globe will force the Labor government to take a stand on matters vital to Israel.

From experience, however — first with Ramsay MacDonald and later with the Atlee-Bevin government, the only two periods when labor conquered power in Britain —, the disparity between promise and fulfillment is history. It was the Bevin experiment particularly which made many Jews cautious in apprising a Labor victory.

True, for sentimental reasons and because of an innate passion for social justice, a great number of Jews voted for the Labor ticket. But it is pertinent to remind them — and all of us — that the only active anti-Zion policy in Britain's history was that of Bevin. (MacDonald, as it is known, was, in general, a turncoat).

On the other hand, the only episode of close cooperation between a British government and Israel was that of Suez — when the Conservative, Anthony Eden, governed Britain.

Simultaneously one necessarily should not apply the lessons of history in this case. We all hope Harold Wilson proves a pleasant surprise in the sense that he fulfills his pre-election promises.

PAST AND FUTURE

CANADIAN ZIONISTS

The national convention of the Zionist Organization of Canada, which takes place this weekend in Montreal, could turn into a milestone in the history of Canadian Jewry's most glorious movement. What happens to Canadian Zionism, as to Zionism in general, depends upon the men meeting to determine the future activity of the ZOC.

They, and no one else, can answer the question raised the world over, whether a Zionist movement still is necessary in the seventeenth year of Jewish statehood in the Land of Israel. They, and no one else, can confirm or reject the attitude by most Israelis that Zionism is a thing of the past and never can live and flourish again. It is they, and no one else, who will reestablish the Zionist movement as an important factor in the Jewish community or let it wither away in its present state of inactivity.

The Zionist Organization is not a social club. Neither is it a committee for promoting Jewish education, not even for the dissemination of the Hebrew language and culture. The Zionist Organization, moreover, is not a bureau to promote travel to Israel; nor was it created for purposes and functions that are those of second or third rate groups. It can continue to be either the great movement of the Jewish revolution of our times, the movement of non-conformists who dared to launch the idea of a Jewish nation on its own territory and fought courageously for the realization of our dream, or it will disintegrate no matter how many people pay lip service to its continuance.

The Zionist Organization cannot be a part time sport — and retain its glory.

The Zionist Organization will not be saved by official or unofficial recognition of this or that Israeli government. It can only become reborn and lead the people if it dares continue to hold on to the flag of national Jewish rebirth.

Talking about Jewish education will not create Jewish day schools. Discussing Hebrew culture will not make people speak Hebrew. Moreover, it is a fact that the cultural aspect of Zionism, recently overemphasized by some of its leaders, is the one area in which Zionists cannot unite. Building schools necessarily raises the problem of the kind of education such Day Schools would provide. There is the difference of opinion between those who cling to tradition, to Torah, and those who prefer a secular expression in the school system. The plain fact is, the existing Jewish Day Schools were not established by Zionist groups but by Jews, Zionists and non-Zionists, who understood their importance.

In our opinion, Zionism still is the political movement of those Jews who believe in the People Apart, with its historic center in the Land of Israel. It still is the movement for the Ingathering of the Exiles. It still is the movement TO SOLVE the Jewish problem by consolidating the State of Israel economically and through the infusion of new immigration from lands where emigration is a vital necessity and also from Jewish centers in any part of the world where the young must be inculcated with the spirit emanating from Zion.

The Zionist movement was born as a movement for self-emancipation. In order to continue being what it should, the present Zionist organizations must dare emancipate themselves from the chains of organizational and bureaucratic traditions that somehow seem to hinder a renascence of the Zionist movement, adapted to the needs of the time and recognizing the fact of Israel's existence.

Looking at the schedule of this convention, we cannot help but repeat for the "nth" time: too many points on the agenda are unhealthy for such an assembly. Let the Zionist movement concentrate upon one task, a truly Zionist task. Let it formulate one slogan, a Zionist slogan, and no one will raise the question of its continuous raison d'etre.

In one word, the Zionist convention must find the courage to tell the Jewish people that all roads in our historic march lead to Zion, and that Zion is our destiny.

OPINIONS by MEYER LEBOVIC

EDUCATION AND THE COMMUNITY

Mr. Lebovic is president of Toronto's Ner Israel Yeshiva College. His opinions are not necessarily those of The Canadian Jewish News.
THE EDITORS

Convalescing after a serious heart attack which I suffered some months ago, I had passing thoughts — some serious, some not. I found that I had become objective about the events in my life; I was able to assess clearly which of my actions were worthwhile and which had been a waste of time. My success in business and my material pleasures were brushed aside in my thoughts; I became absorbed in the contemplation of what I felt had been the most important work of my life. It had not always brought me pleasure — indeed, at times bitterness and disillusionment drained my energy and left me exhausted — but my efforts for Torah education were truly my greatest work, and I feel now that my fervor and the joy in my achievements sustained me during my illness.

Particularly at that time did I think of the long hours I had expended on the Ner Israel Yeshiva College of Toronto. I was happy that I, along with a handful of friends, had started that Yeshiva.

I devoted five years of service to this work, yet a great deal remained to be done. The need gave me renewed vigor and I ached to be back on the job.

Although I still am unable to participate actively in its day to day operations as formerly, my returning strength will enable me to devote time to Ner Israel and to its work for Torah.

While my thoughts were occupied thus, it struck me as strange that, although Ner Israel has been established more than five years ago and has grown from twelve students studying in an old edifice to one-hundred and forty housed in several fine buildings on a million-dollar campus, there still are some Jews here who dispute the whole idea of a Yeshiva in Toronto; there even are some hostile to any Torah education whatsoever for our children.

How can we expect our young to grow up as Jews if we do not teach them our code of law and how to appreciate their heritage? Even in the free atmosphere of Canada we can see the toll that assimilation has taken.

The first Jews in Canada had fine reputations as such and as patriots, yet their descendants are lost to us. The reason for this lies solely in the lack of Jewish educational facilities for children at that time.

Ironical that today we should feel the need to try to convince our own Jews of the vital necessity for Jewish education! Yet this, I feel, is our greatest task today.

I was aghast when, last year during our campaign for much needed funds for Ner Israel, I approached a particular businessman, successful and affluent, and invited him to contribute. He told me that he would not give anything because he did not believe Jewish education was necessary. This gentleman since has passed away and I feel that it cannot be long before nothing is left of Judaism in his family. Yet his ancestors were the same as mine—his heritage, my heritage —and he was thoughtlessly throwing away the fruits of their wisdom handed down through the ages.

However, there are in Toronto many dedicated persons anxious to continue the traditions of our people. Merely a glance at the list of more than one thousand people who have contributed to the deficit campaign of Ner Israel thrills me at the depth of feeling for Torah. The thought of two hundred and fifty people who attend the fifth annual campaign banquet at the Yeshiva, and who came in the knowledge that the sole purpose was to help Torah in Toronto, should give the lie to the defeatists in our midst who cry that Torah is old fashioned, we need not "waste" money on higher Jewish education.

For years we have approached Toronto's United Jewish Welfare Fund asking for financial help for our fine institution—in vain. From time to time we have submitted briefs; from time to time the various committees of Welfare have discussed our financial plight (since we insist on taking students on their ability to study and not on their ability to pay). Motions have been passed at meetings of the United Jewish Welfare Fund, that Ner Israel Yeshiva be granted affiliation with the Bureau of Jewish Education.

For example, at a meeting of the Joint Committee of the United Jewish Welfare Fund on December 15, 1960, the motion was carried as follows: the Yeshiva Ner Israel was to be granted affiliation with the Bureau as of September 1960, as a Yeshiva; again on April 11, 1961, at a meeting of the Executive Committee, the same motion was passed; at another meeting of the Joint Committee of the United Jewish Welfare Fund and Bureau of Jewish Education, I was present when one of the top three contributors to the United Jewish Welfare Fund moved a recommendation that Ner Israel Yeshiva be granted a subsidy based upon a formula to be recommended by the Bureau of Jewish Education. This motion was passed and confirmed on October 13, 1961, at another meeting of the Joint Committee. Moreover, in various correspondence in the past years with the president of United Jewish Welfare, we have been told that the new formula was in the process of being reviewed and that Ner Israel would be dealt with under this new formula. We now are reaching the end of 1964. Although the new formula has been established, still Ner Israel has received nothing whatsoever of financial aid from the United Jewish Welfare Fund, not even in the form of a promise.

Perhaps the majority of contributors to the United Jewish Welfare Fund are unaware that Ner Israel has not received a subsidy. Hence I feel that it is worthwhile to bring the following facts to the attention of the community: Ner Israel, in my opinion, offers more of Jewish education than some other institutions subsidized by the Welfare Fund and, in addition, gives the full secular high school program as provided and controlled by the Ontario Board of Education; that, as to our enrolment, the number of students attending Ner Israel and taking its courses is at least double that attending the other community high school; that Ner Israel is the first school of its kind in Toronto with students from all the major schools here, whereas the community high school draws its senior students only from its own school enrolment. (The truth is that Ner Israel attracts students each year from the community high school itself.) In short, we are a school serving the entire Jewish community, filling a deep need in the Jewish life of Toronto, providing that higher Jewish education which enables many students to remain in Canada rather than be forced to go abroad to study.

It is not a happy situation for a leading school of Jewish learning, such as Ner Israel Yeshiva College, to be left to fend for itself and to depend entirely on its own fund raising efforts. Surely the time has come for our communal leaders to consider this matter in a historical light and to do justice by one of the most important causes in Jewish life.

NICKNAMES FOR THE BIBLE

Nicknames for the Bible! Yes—the Bible really has, from time to time, received several. It was first written, of course, in Aramaic and Hebrew, so it has had to be translated into other languages in order that people all over the world can read and study it.

There have been a great many translations and each has usually been given a different name to distinguish it from the others. Those names were generally connected with something, perhaps odd in the text, or the circumstances under which the work was done. From these names, it is easy to discover the exact date when it was first printed.

For instance, the first translation of the Old Testament was about 260 B.C.E. and was named the Septuagint (from the Greek seventy) because 70 men were engaged in the work.

Then in C.E. 405 St. Jerome translated the Scriptures into Latin. That translation was named the "Vulgate" because it made the Bible known to the "Vulgus", which means the multitude.

King James I ordered the Authorised Version to be read in the Church of England and the book, therefore, is sometimes named after him.

Then came the "Pearl" Bible so named because it was printed in the size type known as Pearl by Field in 1653. A Bible printed in Geneva in 1560, has the unusual nickname of "The Breeches Bible", because in it the word "breeches" is used instead of "girdles" in Genesis 3, 7.

Strange translations have often been the cause of queer nicknames for the Bible. There was the "Beer" Bible, so called because the word "beer" was used instead of "strong drink" in Isaiah 24, 9.

The verse reads:
"They drink not wine with a song,
Beer is bitter to them that drink it".
Instead of:
"They drink not wine with a song,
Strong drink is bitter to them that drink it".

In 1551 John Daye printed a Bible which became known as the "Bug Bible" because he translated Psalm 91, 5, to read:

"So thou shalt not be afraid for the bugs by night,
Nor for the arrow that flieth by day".
Instead of:
"So thou shalt not be afraid of the terror by night,
Nor for the arrow that flieth by day".

The first edition of the Authorised Version also contains a misprint in Ruth 3, 15.

It reads:
"And he went into the city".
So it was known as the "He" Bible.

When the mistake was corrected in a later issue the same year, the new book became known as the "She" Bible, which was no improvement at all!

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

THE FORCE OF EXAMPLE

Everyone knows the story of the binding of Isaac. That story begins with the words "And God tested Abraham". This is the plain meaning of the text, but there is an obvious difficulty. Why did God need to test Abraham to see if he would obey him? Surely God's knowledge is infinite, and He would know that Abraham would carry out his command: Then what need was there to test him?

One of the answers suggested has relation to the verb in the Hebrew sentence, which is translated "tested". But it can also be derived from the Hebrew word meaning an uplifted banner, or flag. This observation on the meaning of the word is significant. God put Abraham to this trial in order to lift him up as a banner before the peoples so that Abraham's faith and trust could be the great example for mankind. Not God "tested" Abraham but God "lifted up" Abraham so that the patriarch's perfect obedience to the will of God could guide men in search of God.

It was nicely said by a modern preacher that religion cannot be taught — it is caught from someone else. Many years before the Jewish teachers expressed the same idea when they said that words, speech, and formal teaching are good but not nearly as good as the practical example. For example it is a most powerful force for good or evil which influences and moulds the way of life and thinking of all of us. There is not a parent who does not become responsible for the development of his child through the conscious or unconscious example he shows throughout the early and formative years of his child's life. There is no schooling so gloriously effective for good than the steady example of wise parents. Conversely there is no greater source of evil than a wicked example shown to children.

In Jewish ethical values our teachers often draw a distinction between a sin committed in private and one done publicly. This is not such hypocrisy as it seems at first, because the sin committed in the public eye is an act which leads others to sin. It is no longer a private matter between the individual and his God, since the author now involves his fellow men by exercising the influence of an example. Jeroboam was the first king of the divided state of Israel. He was a great sinner and among other things he set up the altars of Baal and led his people to idolatry. Throughout the subsequent historical books of the Bible we find Jeroboam described as "himself a sinner, who caused others to sin". The first part might never have been written except for the second phrase. Jeroboam goes down in shame not so much as the one who sinned himself — but as the evil genius who led the people astray.

But a good example is incalculable also for good. Some time ago the newspapers carried the story of eleven men, women and children who were imprisoned by an ice gorge and were starving. A man offered a very large reward to anyone who would venture across the ice to effect a rescue. No one responded to the repeated offer. Then this same man himself got a rope, tied it around his waist and was about to start across the ice. Immediately four men jumped to his side and offered to go with him. All they needed was an example, the power of a good example which leads to deeds of greatness. This lesson is the burden of our text.

"And God lifted up Abraham like a banner" — so that all might see the pattern of a life of perfect trust in God's purpose and complete obedience to the will of God. This was the greatness of Abraham and it is greatness that will never die, because every day there are men and women whose souls are sensitive enough to follow a noble example.

letter from Prague by DR. R. ILTES

Shadow Community

Throughout Czechoslovakia the Jews have celebrated the Holy-days in the traditional way. Synagogues and prayer-houses were full to capacity.

Chief Rabbi Richard Feder preached in Brno, Chief Rabbi Elias Katz, of Slovakia, in Bratislava, and Rabbi Bernard Farkas in Prague. In the other communities messages from Rabbi Feder and Rabbi Katz were read out to the congregations.

For Succot there were abundant supplies of the Arba Minim and, after the processions with the sifrei Torah on Simchat Torah, the children received their customary sweets.

Many young people took part in the annual Ellul pilgrimage to the site of the Theresienstadt concentration camp, sponsored by the Council Bohemia and Moravia assembled there, including 200 members of the postwar generation, who thus saw for the first time the places where the Nazis imprisoned and murdered the Jews of Czechoslovakia during the war, and heard the gallant stories of members of the resistance in Theresienstadt. Guests from Israel, Yugoslavia, Canada and Rumania also attended, as well as Mr. Yehuda Nassie, the Israeli charge d'affaires, and members of his diplomatic mission.

The main address at the cemetery in front of the crematorium was delivered by Rabbi Feder, and kaddish was recited at the memorial to the martyrs of Theresienstadt, where wreaths were laid by Mr. Frantisek Ehrmann and Rabbi Farkas, representing the Council of Jewish Religious Communities, Mr. Nassie and representatives of the National Memorial to the Theresienstadt Resistance, the State institution in charge of the site of the former ghetto and the police gaol there.

Rabbi Feder's address, a tour of Theresienstadt and the showing of two documentary films presented a striking picture of the history of this terrible place.

In the evening, when the pilgrims had returned to Prague, there was a commemorative evening at the old Jewish Town Hall. The author of the Terezin Requiem", Dr. Josef Bor, presented tape recordings of excerpts from his book with musical accompaniment, and Dr. Rudolf Iltis directed a lyrical montage of Theresienstadt poems by former inmates, Ilza Weber, Dagmar Hilarova, Pavel Friedmann and Zdenek Jelinek.

The following day, Dr. Iltis led a tour of the former Jewish quarter of Prague and a visit to the Jewish Museum. Part of the expenses of the pilgrimage were covered by funds from the Claims Conference.

The State Jewish Museum in Prague is receiving a record number of visitors, and great interest is also being shown in the renovated Spanish Synagogue in Prague, where there is a permanent exhibition of synagogue tapestries and other treasures covering the last five centuries.

The State Jewish Museum, the Regional Museum in Kromeriz and other institutions co-operated in mounting a permanent exhibition, "Jews in Moravia", that had its festive opening in the middle of September in the Shach Synagogue, in the centre of the well-preserved former ghetto in the town of Holesov, next to a historic cemetery.

This will undoubtedly soon gain the interest of tourists, as will also the other permanent exhibition organised in Prague by the State Jewish Museum. This will be opened in the former Maisl Synagogue, now fully restored, towards the end of October, and will include gold and silver religious appurtenances.

Because of great public interest, the Franz Kafka exhibition in the Museum of National Literature has been extended by two months, to the end of November. Then it will move to Brno. A new exhibition will follow, again honouring a Jewish writer, a contemporary of Kafka, Richard Weiner, who would have been 80 years old this year.

TORONTO ZIONIST COUNCIL UNDERTAKES COMMUNITY CANVASS FOR ISRAEL BONDS

An overflow attendance of community Zionist leaders took part in a "Leadership Dinner" sponsored by the Toronto Zionist Council on Thursday evening, October 15th at the Zionist Centre, and unanimously endorsed a Four-Point Program of intensive participation in the 1964 State of Israel Bond Campaign in Toronto. Dr. Max M. Glassman, Chairman of the evening, outlined the projected program, which aims at a 100% target of Bond purchasers within Zionist ranks: an intensive canvass of non-purchasers in the community-at-large; a series of Telethons commencing November 1st with a follow-up team of canvassers to collect pledges and cheques for bond purchases; and an outstanding culminating event on December 9th at the conclusion of the Zionist Bond Drive with a world-renowned dignitary as guest speaker, and all Bond purchasers and workers as invited guests.

Guest speaker of the Dinner was Mr. Jacques Torczyner, leading figure in World Zionism, who delivered an inspiring adress on the crucial role of the Zionist movement throughout the world in maintaining a strong and constant link between Judaism in the Diaspora and in Israel. Other participants in the program included, Justice Abraham Lieff, Bert Godfrey, General Campaign Chairman, State of Israel Bonds of Toronto; Julius Hayman, President Ontario Region, Z.O.C., Mr. Gabriel Lourie, Consul of Israel in Toronto, and Dr. Allan Small, President Toronto Zionist Council.

EGLINTON LODGE B'NAI B'RITH HONOURS MANNY SWADRON FOR UNUSUAL EFFORTS

Members of Eglinton Lodge B'nai B'rith paid glowing tribute to Manny Swadron, Past Israel Bond Chairman of the Lodge, for his years of devoted service to the cause of Israel's economic upbuilding, at an outstanding evening at Adath Israel Synagogue on October 15th, when Harry Frank, over-all Israel Bond Chairman for Toronto B'nai B'rith presented Mr. Swadron with a handsome scroll in recognition of his outstanding leadership. In his presentation address Mr. Frank declared that "When Manny Swadron took over as Bond Chairman for Eglinton Lodge three years ago, we were at low ebb with only about 39 Bond purchasers in our ranks. When he turned over the reins at the end of his term, well over 100 members had become Israel Bond purchasers, and the climate of acceptance and understanding of the nature of the Bond Program in Eglinton Lodge became a model for other lodges to emulate." To date in the 1964 Israel Bond Campaign Eglinton Lodge has maintained its position of leadership with a 75 per cent purchase record.

By IRV PAISLEY Deputy Reeve

In previous articles, I have stressed the importance of proper municipal planning and how such planning can be implemented only by a forward thinking council assisted by a planning board ready, able and willing to "see tomorrow, today".

Premier Robarts' recent announcement, that Ontario's contribution to Canada's centennial project would consist of a $5 million, 180-acre, exhibit parkland development to be located at the southwest corner of Eglinton and Don Mills Road, is a prime example of just the kind of magnificent and spectacular result is to be expected under such a system of modern municipal planning.

The prime requisites for Premier Robarts' government planners were found in "a package" in North York. This package did not develop overnight. Already standing at the selected "Golden Square" are the following nationally important projects: The Imperial Oil Building, company headquarters for Ontario and the main accounting center for Canada; International Business Machines (IBM), major Canadian plant; Flemingdon Park, Canada's first apartment city with a population expected to exceed 14,000. North York township is most fortunate in having the finest staff of municipal employees anywhere in Canada, coupled with men of ideas and vision who are selected by the voters to represent the best interests on both Council and Planning Board. It is this kind of combination of municipal employees, councillors and planning board members that has made North York the vast, modern, attractive and magnetic community it is today and will continue to be to an even greater extent tomorrow.

When I say, continue to be, I refer to)the following large building projects still on the drawing boards but slated for construction in the very near future (at the same location): IBM's Canadian headquarters comprising a $7 million addition to the northwest corner; a $10 million office complex in Flemingdon Park, to be called Olympia Square, whose main building will tower 875 feet high and will offer a view of the mist over Niagara Falls on a clear day.

Entertainment, cultural and public services are also in Canada's "Four Corners of Prosperity", further.

For an outstanding example of a modern entertainment complex, there is the popular and expanding Inn on the Park, the Japanese Canadian Cultural Center which lends a touch of the exotic Far East and provides North Yorkers with that international flavor of cosmopolitan acceptance so essential for the broad cultural development of the younger generation; head offices of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, reminding one of the great role governments play today in the betterment of all citizens by supplying basic medical needs for everyone regardless of race, creed or color.

Although one may well be proud of this community (a portion only of which is described above), one must ever be vigilant towards those who would take virtually any measures to rob some of their proper and continuing progress.

It will be but a short time now before the "Battle for the CBC" is decided. Of course, I refer to the location of Television City in the heart of Don Mills.

The vision of our planners, in coopération with farsighted developers, proved the feasibility and desirability of selecting a magnificent site available in Flemingdon Park. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation realized the potential of this area almost as soon as development started, for geographically it is situated on an ideally strategic piece of land.

Those involved quickly informed the township officials of their interest whereupon many months of negotiation ensued with planners and other township officials, as well as with the management of the development company. Finally, the preliminary design came off the drawing boards, with the endorsement of all specialists involved. A model was made and plans for removal to the new site began to take shape.

North York's reeve is justified in adopting a fighting attitude to preserve the decisions already made. North York officials created Television City; also it had a hand in the design. The township requires this complex to round off a huge "integrated area", part of which has been described. Already the community is assured of the prestige industrial development to complement the location of such a fine cultural complex. Realizing its vast cultural potential, the City Fathers have been quick to make a last minute dash to the federal authorities in order to snatch this prize and circumvent decision already made.

They had their chance yet in 1959, and they lost when the CBC purchased the Flemingdon Park site, by far the best available. In comparison with the CBC's purchase of 33 acres of prime North York industrial land, Toronto City can, at best, offer some three acres in congested downtown.

From this it can be seen how, at all times, elected representatives must stand vigilant against unwarranted assaults on the continued expansion of the township in a manner consistent with the needs and requirements of its citizens. As in the past, the present and into the future, the full potential of the township can be achieved only by every citizen's playing an active part. It is up to the voter to make certain that the representatives selected are the best available. One should attend every ratepayer meeting in the area this fall, pay close attention to the policy claims of all candidates. Then, and only then, he should make his decision known by exercising his franchise. The progress of the Township of North York for the future lies in the ballot box. It should be made use of on the first Monday in December; meanwhile one must be kept well informed.

NEW SEPHARDI SYNAGOGUE

BRUSSELLS (JCNS) — The foundation stone of a new Sephardi synagogue was laid this week at Schaarbeek, a suburb of Brussels, by the president of the Sephardi Jewish community, M. Conrad Franco.

Plans for the new synagogue were made many years ago. It will be the first Sephardi synagogue in Brussels. Until now, a hall has been put at the disposal of Sephardim at the Ashkenazi main synagogue.

U. S. JEWISH SOLDIERS IN LIBYA HARASSED

WASHINGTON (JCNS)—Letters from America's Wheelus Air Base in Libya to Senator Jacob Javits have charged that Jewish members of the American Air Force there must conceal their religion and are unable to teach it to their children.

When Senator Javits made inquiries at the Department of the Air Force he received a letter from a Colonel Frederick Fahringer, saying that Jewish religious facilities were available to men serving at Wheelus, but admitting that television and radio programmes there were edited to avoid annoying the Arabs.

The Air Force letter is considered inadequate by the Senator, who has promised a "penetrating inquiry" into the matter.

So strong was anti-Jewish feeling among Libyans, the letters said, that families living outside the base had to hide their Jewish identity.

JEWS AT THE OLYMPICS

by BRIAN GLANVILLE

The Israeli team, blue-blazered and Panama hatted, had just flown into Tokyo when I arrived.

In the Olympic Village next day, Allan Jay was to be seen, amiably riding a bicycle — the fashionable means of transport —and also the massive, impressive bulk of America's Gary Gubner, the living refutation of the libel of "the little Jew".

The astonishing thing is that Gubner, a world-record holder barely a couple of years ago, isn't here to put the shot at all, but to lift weights, and he only just made the weightlifting team.

Somehow, obscurely, something went wrong, and the relentless march of record-breaking has left this giant behind.

Just how relentless and how fast the march is may be gauged by the fact that Parry O'Brien, entering on his fourth Olympics — the man who revolutionized shot put technique — took third place in the American trials with a put of over 63 feet, better than anything he'd achieved in three previous Olympiads, at which he'd won two gold and a silver medal.

Issy Berger is here again, too; cheerful and blue-eyed, anxious to win glory in the featherweight lifting event, to make up for his disappointments in Rome. A West Indian, lifting for Britain, said he'd seen him in training and he looked casual. But Louis Martin, Britain's best hope of all for a gold medal, a huge, jolly, bearded Jamaican, said: "Berger's a natural. He will still need plenty of beating, it is clear."

Martin is desperately anxious to win. "I should really like to win," he told me. "I can see myself winning this year, but I can't in another four years. I can see myself making the team for a tremendous length of time.

"To win, you've got to be able to lose, but this time I should like to win, because I think I've earned this.

Though certainly no one could be taking things more seriously than Robbie Brightwell, the British captain; whether it is his role as captain — and his own office is clearly placarded — or his mission in the 400 metres.

FOR THE BEAUTY CONSCIOUS

After three years in the same place, The Nupoliton, one of Downsview's most popular beauty salons, has moved to larger quarters at 328 Wilson Avenue. Customers will be happy to learn that bus service is right at the corner.

The Nupoliton is owned by two beauty experts familiar with the art of making women look beautiful.

Fernando De Santis brings his talent from Italy where, for five years, he did nothing but utilize his ability and knowledge in transforming the average duckling into the lovely swan.

Mario Reame also devoted seven years there, having taught lovely ladies how to become still lovelier.

It is therefore natural for the two to merge in partnership and lavish upon their many happy patrons the results of their experiences.

The Nupoliton is the mecca for the latest in hairstyling. Fernando and Mario, with their skilled assistants, will cut, coif and color your hair in the most modern manner.

Permanents are given by specially trained experts.

Manicures have that special zing — finished in the new-rage colors like baroque beige and coco baroque, the latter a bold, uninhibited mocha shade.

Unassumingly but surely, The Nupoliton is becoming the salon for Downsview's discerning female.

UNSUNG HEROES

BY RUTHIE

Isn't it marvelous that Dr. Martin Luther King has received the Nobel Prize for Peace? If he deserves it, he deserves it, and shoin (finished).

But do I know people who should get some kind of recognition! And they never even wind up with a thank you.

Mama, for one, would consider herself an A-1 candidate. How many times, when she argued with Papa, she'd say

"Oz ikh kenn ois-halten, bin ikh shtahrker fun eizen (If I could hold out, I'm stronger than iron)."

I never really knew what she was holding out from. But, whatever it was, if it proved she was stronger than iron, then she certainly rated recognition.

Many times at the end of a tiring day she'd groan, "Ikh khub merr nisht kein koyakh (I haven't any more any strength)."

And, after that if she could have spruced up at least three times a week and run to meetings — then she definitely rated a medal if she had no more strength left.

Papa too would have made a good nominee for a citation, if only because he tried not to hang around the house. All day long he worked; and every evening he spent in shool. So how much was he with Mama except for Shabbos (Saturday) and Sunday? Now, you can't say that isn't a bid for a peace prize.

Not that Mama and Papa had such differences. They loved each other, lived for the children (they said), saw eye to eye on important matters. But the little things were irritating, like, when Mama wanted us kids in bed already and Papa yelled why does she torture us when Papa always came home from work with his pockets full of candy and Mama yelled he was killing our teeth, or when she just made the bed and Papa plopped right onto it. So, to keep peace, he always was at shool, his home away from home.

My sister Mae, who lives in Chicago, should take the cake now.

Remember when I told you her daughter was married and had a baby? Well, you should hear the latest.

Gail was in second year university when she married. During her third year she was pregnant. She was in the ninth month when she took her finals. Mae had to go with her during exam period because Gail, from nervousness, was afraid she'd have the baby in school

And Mae can't say no, to anything. After all, Gail is an ayn-ayntzigs (one and only).

So what do you think happens now? The baby is a year old and my spoiled niece has decided to go back to school. What Gail wants, Gail gets.

"Aw, Mom, be a sport. Will you let a few measely months come between me and my degree?"

Nu, gezugt (said) is gettun (done). Gail goes to school and Mae is baby-sitting.

At eight every morning the kid is dumped on her, and five in the afternoon Mommy comes home from school. Some fun!

Mae is mad at me for needling her. I tell her one day maybe she'll get a diamond monument.

She won't admit she's crazy. She just says, "You'll do the same some day."

Huh, that I gotta see.

A JEWISH HOTEL IN ENGLAND

by CHAIM I. BERMANT

It was 6.55 p.m. and the clock above the door ticked away the last seconds before dinner. In the lounge, the guests were ready. They had been chatting raucously since tea, but now, as the dinner hour approached, the voices fell away till there was complete silence and they sat up, alert, their deaf aids adjusted, crutches and walking-sticks at the ready, waiting to be summoned, as if for the day of judgement.

"When you got nothing to do", a stout lady said, "you live for food", and food is something which Jewish hotels provide in abundance. Excess is their stock-in-trade. "Too much is as good as a feast" is their motto, but if one spends enough time in these hotels, one's capacity grows to cope with the demands made upon it.

On one occasion, after I had eaten melon, chopped liver and immense plate of chicken soup with kreplach, I felt like sinking under the table at the sight of a roast chicken, trussed up, ready for sacrifice, but a frail little lady, who looked as if she subsisted on wafers and water, waded into it, and then demanded, and received, a second helping.

"Half the people here have double portions of everything," said the maître d'hôtel.

"You know who makes money out of this hotel? Not me," said the proprietor, "it's the doctor round the corner," but he didn't exactly look as if he was losing money.

The economy of the Jewish hotel trade is geared to the old-age trade, and shadchanut, and both are booming, and as some ladies, to their credit, never abandon hope, it is difficult to say where the shadchanut trade ends and the old-age trade begins, but generally, the latter is year round, the former is seasonal.

There is also the seminar trade, but I am not sure how favourably it is viewed by hoteliers, for seminars can upset the regular clientèle.

"This was last winter," said an elderly gentleman. "It was Shabbos afternon and I was going into the lounge for a schluff, when I found the place full of people, and what do you think they were doing? Praying. On a Shabbos afternoon, praying."

I could understand the tone of sacrilege in his voice, for the lounge, apart from serving as a quasi-dormitory, is also the nachos-exchange. It is here that the ladies assemble and draw whole family albums from the depth of their handbags.

"This is my son the accountant. He does the books for the biggest people. He was only two when the photo was taken. He looks a bit different now. What? I'm sorry. My mistake. It isn't my son at all. It's my niece by my brother's second marriage.

"This is my grandson, the one with the six A levels I told you about? What's A levels? How should I know what's A levels, but he's got six of them and that's in the same year as he got the mumps."

There is of course nachos and nachos:

"Now this was taken at the stone setting of my late husband. Yes, it's black granite. I'm ashamed to tell you what it cost, but he was good to me all my life. I shouldn't be good to him when he's dead?"

During late night tea, in the hour before sleep, conversation turns naturally to health:

"So I said to the doctor — actually he wasn't a doctor, he was Mr. somebody, a surgeon, but a doctor all the same — I said to him, 'Doctor,' I said, 'are you sure it's got to come out? Can't you give me something in a bottle instead?' He said, 'Do you want to be cured, or don't you?' I said, 'Sure I want to be cured, but I don't fancy being opened up.' He said, 'It's nothing. It's like unzipping a travel bag'." Or:

"When I came out of the operation I was the colour of this table-cloth. I thought I was dead. Have you ever thought you was dead? I thought I was dead, and the thing that worried me was that I had forgotten to cancel the milk and papers."

And then silence, till one is left with the insomniacs playing patience and the tread of waiters carrying water and Alka-Seltzer far into the night.

DINER'S CLUB, AIR FRANCE DEAL

An agreement permitting the use of credit card payment for air transportation has been concluded by Air France and Diners' Club, according to Michel Pairault, Canada Manager for Air France. The agreement was signed in Paris by Michel de Villeneuve, Air France's Vice President for Sales and Mark Sulkes, Vice President of the Diners' Club Inc.

Air France is the first European airline to sign a Diners' Club credit card agreement, which will become effective on or before December 15, 1964. Under conditions of the agreement, travellers will be permitted to purchase Air France tickets from Canada or the United States to any of the 112 destinations on the French Airline's world-wide system and interline connecting carriers. The plan will be a service convenience to the more than 1,250,000 Diners' Club members.

Canadian and United States' holders of Diners' Club cards, when purchasing tickets in North America, will have a choice of regular short-term credit card billing or long-term deferred payment plans ranging from three months to two years for repayment.

The agreement between Air France and Diners' Club covers credit card holders throughout the world. Air France believes that the agreement will be an added convenience for air travellers and a new stimulus to further development of travel by air.

PIANIST-COMEDIAN HERE PRIOR TO BROADWAY OPENING.—Victor Borge, who brings his famous "Comedy in Music" to Toronto for one week at O'Keefe Center on October 26th - 31st (no performance on Thursday, October 29th). No one, including Mr. Borge, knows beforehand what will occur during the evening.

BORGE SURE TO WOW 'EM

Comedy in Music, featuring the inimitable Victor Borge, comes to O'Keefe Center for one week, October 26th — 31st; no performance on Thursday, October 29th.

Though Mr. Borge considers himself unpredictable, one thing is certain: members of the audience will certainly hear their favorite selections sometime during the evening. The humor of the famous Danish pianist turned comedian never is the same for any two of his two-and-a-half-hour programs. Part of this is due to the audience participation at which time Borge asks for request numbers.

GADNA will give one concert ONLY in Toronto on Sunday Nov. 15, at Massey Hall.

● Klaus Friderberger, Berlin-born Jewish painter, has been awarded the Gold Medal for painting at this year's Prix European at Ostend.

● Victor Borge, who comes to Toronto's O'Keefe Center next week, isn't much of a hit with London critics. According to one, he "is a fine performer but technique is no adequate substitute for content, and much of his present material is either weak or old." We shall see, and probably differ.

● In Israel there still is contention about rendering the works of German-born, anti-semitic Richard Wagner and Richard Strauss. In musical circles, the feeling is for introducing these composers' works to audiences as furthering their knowledge of good music. But laymen will have none of it. And the cold war is still on.

● Brian Epstein, the Beatles' manager, plans to build (in conjunction with a British disc-jockey) a theater which will be a cultural center for a local area. This is no surprise to those who know of his interest in the legitimate theater. At one time he trained as an actor.

● Few Israelis, though they now take the Inbal Dance Theater pretty much for granted, are fully aware of the decisive metamorphosis that has come over the group since its inception fifteen years ago. At first its prime purpose was to rescue some of Yemenite Jewry's trdaitional songs and dances from the obliterating attritions of a modern society. It was a folk-dance troupe. Since then, however, folk-dancing has become primarily an activity of youth movements and of youths in agricultural villages; it is now associated by many adult Israelis with a naive period in their lives. And the tendency is to link Inbal with that period.

Meanwhile, Inbal has attained a sophisticated air. Inbal now is looked to as a source of inspiration for origial creations. Inbal's tours abroad have reaped a flurry of rave reviews and packed houses. Its greatest achievement is that of having become a flexible instrument that any choreographer intent on Israeli or Jewish themes could use confidently and to advantage.

● Two leading Jewish—Soviet film producers, Sender Stolper and Wolf Bassov, have been given the highest awards for their services to Russia's film industry. A Jewish film actor, Hersh Kazintev, won a special award for his performance in a film version of Hamlet.

● The Yiddish Theater of Paris opened its new season at the Theatre de l'Entrepot, near the Place de la Republique, with, The Smith's Daughter, by Peretz Hirschbein.

● The Bezalel National Museum has begun moving to its new home in the kirya: The present building, in the center of town, is to be closed next December, after 66 years.

The new National Museum, which will also incorporate the government's Museum of Antiquities, the Shrine of the Book, and the Sculpture Garden donated by Billy Rose American-Jewish philanthropist, will be formally opened on May 11, 1965.

In anticipation of moving into its new premises, Bezalel recently made several important acquisitions in Jewish ceremonial art and in general art. They include a large number of ceremonial objects from Spain, the Sholem Asch bequest of sacramental articles, the Ticho collection of Chanukkiot, the tenth-century doors and wall plaques from the Central Synagogue in Cairo, and the doors from the Cracow Synagogue, and the Lasker legacies of Picassos, Renoirs, Monets, Degas and Chagalls.

● Charles Aznavour, French actor and singer, left France this week for New York, where he will conclude negotiations for the shooting of a film in Israel in which he will play the main role.

Another well known French actor, Daniel Gelin, already is in Israel for the filming of, l'Heure de Verite, which tells the story of a former S.S. officer who settles in Israel and leads a happy life, marrying a Jewish girl, until a young sociologist accidentally discovers the past of the quiet Israeli citizen.

Daniel Gelin plays the role of a young professor of the Hebrew University who favors leniency towards the Nazi criminal. The American actor, Halsey Brett, portrays the sociologist, and Corinne Marchant, French actress, the latter's wife The film will be screened in Paris next spring.

● Banjo-eyed comedian Eddie Cantor will be missed by many. He supported many causes. After deciding, in 1936, to give all his energies to aiding refugees, he chose Youth Aliyah work as his main object of help. Besides visiting numerous American cities he toured Europe and South Africa on behalf of the cause. His two-week visit to Britain in 1938 was a remarkable fundraising achievement. Huge sums for bond drives and other pro-Israel causes were collected in America through his activity. When he visited Israel in 1950, he laid the foundation-stone of a Youth Aliyah home at Maale Hahamisha. This was named after him, as were several other centers, also a forest and a kibbutz. The Israel Medal of Valour was bestowed on him in 1961.

Until he had a heart attack in 1952, Cantor's benefit performances on behalf of charities often numbered six a day. For several years he made an average of 100 such appearances. He had another heart attack in 1960.

● Comedian-singer Danny Kaye is in Israel for several days incognito. He registered at the Sharon Hotel in Herzliya, but may decide to stay at the home of a friend, Mr. Meir De Shalit, director of the Government Tourist Corporation. Kaye is accompanied by a close friend, Phillip Goldfarb of New York.

THEATRE IN TORONTO

JEANMAIRE BEAUTIFUL, VERSATILE

by BARBARA I. PEARL

If you expect to behold a version of the Can-Can at any one of the performances of Zizi Jeanmaire and her hit French Revue at O'Keefe Center this week — don't. You will be pleasantly surprised by the novel and original selections Roland Petit has devised.

Zizi has made her mark as a dancer. Now, as a chanteuse, she also comes into her own. But the remarkable thing about Zizi is: she is rather amazing as a comedienne.

The variety-program has proved her many facets. Zizi's rendition of La Cervelle was diverting. Clad in black tights and high heels — which showed off her lovely legs to advantage —, and a top made of sequins, she belted out a version of a girl convincing herself that she needs no brains.

Humorous was the chorus' rendition of Tarantelle as they pranced about and clapped their tarantellas upon the most obvious places. Espana seemed like a satire on the Spanish theme.

Zizi's construction of the girl - loves - boy - kills - boy scene, assisted by Felix Blaszka, was the funniest interpretation of what was considered serious in a 1910 film.

It was, however, a rendition of Les Tatouages — Zizi's explanation of a tatooed man who does a hilarious strip-tease, enacted by Felix Blaszka — which brought howls.

The only thing commendable about Frankie and Johnny was Zizi's gown. She looked like Diamond Lil.

However, the pink fans, Zizi's trademark, had much to do with the general effect of her repertoire.

Yves Saint-Laurent's costumes were dazzling. But there was too much of it to be appreciated at one time.

again—smoke, gamble or write another note of music."

● To Jack Garfein, who directed Sean O'Casey's "Shadow of a Gunman", the Irish playwright who recently died wrote: "We must be always on guard till Jew and Gentile, black and white, red and yellow races learn to live in harmony and friendship—finding out that a clasp of the hand is a gesture from God, and a blow in the face is a blast from Hell."

He discussed the independent spirit with Garfein: "If anyone walks down the street dressed differently, nobody cares. But have an original idea in your head and walk down the street—then you'll see what happens."

● Doris Warner Vidor is back in N.Y., after her brief marriage to Billy Rose ended in divorce. One of her friends said: "I hope you at least got a big diamond out of it. After all, Doris, you gave Billy some of the best weeks of your life".

COMEDY HIT AT ROYAL ALEX

Barefoot In The Park, the Broadway comedy hit of last season, will be performed for a whole month at the Royal Alexandra Theater, starting this week. The cast includes former movie star Myrna Loy, Joan Van Ark, Sandor Szabo and Richard Benjamin. With Mike Nichols directing, it may prove to be the most popular show of the season.

ARGENTINE DIAMOND ANNIVERSARY

BUENOS AIRES (JCNS) — Argentine Jewry last week celebrated the diamond jubilee of the Jewish agricultural settlement in the country, as well as the foundation in November, 1899, of Moisesville, the first Jewish colony here.

The Minister of Agriculture, Senor Walter Kugler, praised the important contribution made by Argentine Jews to the country's agriculture.

Moisesville today has a population of 4,000, of whom 55 per cent are Jews. They own about 450 600-acre farms.
